

AbstractNucleic acid molecules encoding proteins which influence bone development

Nucleic acid molecules encoding proteins which influence bone development of mammals are described as are the encoded proteins, antibodies and pharmaceutical and diagnostic compositions. Moreover, transgenic animals are described which express the described proteins and animals in which the corresponding gene is inactivated and which display an elongation of the bones.